
Spies Lead the War Against the Islamic State

The murtadd al-Qaida branch in Yemen has always bragged about the number of spies they uncovered within its ranks. They have repeatedly published confessions in which these spies declare their subservience to the intelligence of the Al Sa'ud tawaghit, and reveal their recruiting methods, their means of work, and their cooperation with the Crusaders.

The recent conflicts within the ranks of the organization exposed part of the truth of the matter, as some accused its leadership of using the issue of espionage as a way to get rid of those opposing it, by arresting them, torturing them, and extracting confessions from them under the coercion of their spying for the tawaghit and Crusaders, and killing them accordingly.

We do not want to deny nor confirm these claims, because we have not been informed of the secret of their matter on the one hand, and because this matter is not important on the other. Those of them they killed were eliminated while they were murtaddin. Those who were killed by the Crusaders based on the information supplied by the spies, and those who were killed by the murtadd organization under the pretext that they are spies for the Crusaders, are equal. We ask Allah to destroy them all.

We are concerned, however, with what was revealed in the folds of the case, where some of the defendants accused by the murtadd organization of espionage, and who were killed as a result of that, were among the heads of those inciting to the fight the the Islamic State. Truly, tThey were among the most aggressive against the muwahiddin, whether among those affiliated with the students of knowledge from them, or from the emirs of the soldiers, leaders of the fighters, or the media correspondents!

This issue is extremely important to illustrate one of the reasons for the failure of the Islamic State's attempts to avoid war with the murtadd al-Qaida organization, especially as the war wages with the armies of the Crusaders and tawaghit everywhere. The spies of the Crusaders and the tawaghit and their agents, who assumed leadership positions in the organization, were and are still among the greatest instigators to fight and eradicate the Islamic State soldiers, claiming that they are Kharijites or murtaddin!

The leadership of the murtadd organization has made hostility and incitement against the Islamic State the first criterion for evaluating its followers and proving loyalty and reliability during the past years. Therefore, any seeker of positions or fame among them needed nothing except being among the biggest inciters to fight against the Khilafah soldiers, and the most aggressive against their blood and money.

This easy path to confidence and influence within the organization was taken by many spies. They reached through it to their advanced ranks, and by that they managed to kill the unwanted leaders of the murtadd organization themselves.

These leader spies instigate the most to fight the Islamic State, and some of them lead the war on its soldiers, because this increases confidence in the spy within the organization, and helps him greatly to achieve success in his espionage mission. Likewise, he accomplishes the greater goal of those who employ him, by directing the organization's gun from the chest of the Crusaders and murtaddin to the backs of the muwahiddin.

Some of the leaders of the organization made from their war against the Islamic State an offering to win the satisfaction of the tawaghit and the Crusaders, by asserting that their war will only be against the Khilafah soldiers and to prevent their empowerment in the land. Everything else is aimed to fool the stupid ones and make them believe that the organization is still fighting the mushrikin. They see the continuation of war against the Islamic State as a guarantee to avoid being targeted by the Crusaders, and a key to receiving support and funding from them.

On this basis, the Crusaders and tawaghit have, for years, sifted the murtadd organization, by killing those who disagree with fighting the Islamic State, believe in postponing it, or believe in fighting it as well as fighting the Crusaders and tawaghit. In return, they keep those who make all their movements based on the orders of the intelligence services, so the organization is directed to fight the muwahiddin, and held back from fighting the Crusaders and their murtadd allies.

We have seen over the past days how the Crusader spies succeeded in luring the murtadd emir of al-Qaida Abu Mus'ab 'Abdul-Wadud and a number of the organization's leaders to a dangerous area in which many of their brothers were killed previously, under the pretext of "managing negotiations," as well as to lead the war on the Islamic State. This war was ignited by some of their emirs in the desert, and some of those professing knowledge incited for it.

Likewise, we see the Crusaders today, differentiate when targeting the murtadd followers of al-Qa'ida in West Africa, by killing and targeting. In the areas of fighting against the Islamic State, the Crusader planes are blind and ignore their large forces, their military convoys, and their open movements, and do not target them by bombing and destruction. Support and finance have been passed to them through militias loyal to the murtadd governments. On the other hand, and in other areas, the Crusader planes target them, even if they were hidden small groups, and their spies pursue them, and the murtadd militias affiliated with them kill and capture them, as happened in several cases in northern Mali during the past two months.

This method of screening and taming has confirmed a fact to the murtadd members of al-Qa'ida that fighting the Crusaders will only bring them death and displacement. Thus, they must be befriended. Likewise, fighting the tawaghit will not lead them to overthrow their rule, so it is inevitable that they will negotiate to acquire some gains. As for fighting the Islamic State, it is the only thing that will spare them from the bombing of the Crusaders, and open the doors of support and funding to them. Hence, they started to devote themselves to only doing it, and leave everything else. And whoever among them deviates from this path, to consider stopping or postponing the war on the muwahiddin, or accepts it, but insists on continuing the war on the Crusaders and the tawaghit, either ends up killed by the organization or expelled under the pretext that he is from the Kharijites. Or the Crusader plans kill him to settle the matter for their servants, which is what we have seen in Sham. This is what their situation has reached everywhere. We ask Allah to spare Muslims from their evil, and make us supreme over them, and all praise is due to Allah, the Lord of all creation.
